

ELASTIC CITY

Welcome to our inaugural Elastic City newsletter!

This is an exciting month, as we've started giving walks to an eager public. We launched on May Day with free walks from the Brooklyn Flea. We had a lot of friends and family join us on an incredibly hot and festive day-- see photos here. We'll be at the outdoor Brooklyn Flea on the first Saturday of each month, so come say hi and take a walk.

In other news:

Niegel Smith is poised and ready to give his walk, "Follow the Leader", starting May 20th. On this walk, we'll brave local security in downtown Manhattan and trail the routines of our elected officials in public spaces. Click here to sign up for "Follow the Leader".

Daniel Neumann will begin his series of soundwalks around DUMBO in just under 2 weeks. Entitled "De-masking the Bridges", we'll walk around the area between the Manhattan and Brooklyn bridges while attuning ourselves to the sounds often blocked by the trains and autos above. He's giving a free walk on Sunday, May 23 at 7pm. You can sign up here for Daniel's walks.

Robert Mauksch led "The World Trade Center Walk" last Sunday. It was a powerful experience to walk around the WTC perimeter with careful attention to how we feel in the moment in relation to each other and to the site. He'll continue his series of walks throughout May and into next month. To sign up for Robert's walk, click here.

We're offering small discounts in an effort to help motivate the wary. Enter this code at checkout for 10% off: redshoes

"Is this a walking tour?" is a question we often receive. The answer is nuh-uh. While these walks contain factual information, that's not the intention. Elastic City walks are experience-based and meant to heighten our awareness, explore our senses and make new rituals in the city. Come join us as the weather gets nicer and please pass along this email to the ones you hold dear.

See you soon!

Love,
Elastic City
